(New York, NY) – January 21, 2018, The High Line Open Studios presents its annual Spring Art season Artists' Open Studios Saturday, and Sunday, March 10-11, 2018.

On Saturday and Sunday, March 10-11, 2018 more than 45 artists in the iconic West Chelsea gallery district will open their studios to the public for a weekend free, self-guided art tour. Presented by the High Line Open Studios, the artists' open studios provides the rare opportunity for the public to meet a multitude of artists, to learn about their works, styles and mediums, and to see first-hand those creative spaces generally open exclusively by appointment.

This year art lovers, dealers, collectors and visitors can preview and purchase artists' works at this annual artists open studios tour which is free and open to the public, located the heart of the West Chelsea gallery district.

The self-guided tour is an open format that has proven to be an ideal way to encourage dialogue between artists and enthusiasts allowing visitors to gain first hand knowledge about the creative process. It has an invaluable value since it gives collectors the opportunity to purchase works directly from the artists' studio inventory and discover new talent before it makes its way to the gallery walls.

This is a great opportunity to discover talents and purchase artwork directly from the artist.

The High Line Open Studios is a bi-annual event allowing the artists of the West Chelsea Arts district to open their studios to the public in the spring and in the fall. This March 2-day event attracts art lovers, collectors, artists, and tourists to the neighborhood making it a community-wide celebration.

This is the event when talents can be discovered and artwork can be purchased still off the market.

The tour begins at the High Line Open Studios information center located in the West Chelsea Building lobbies at 508 and 526 West 26th Street. Printed self-guided Tour Maps can be picked up, as well as artists' materials at the information tables. The open studios Tour Guide Maps are also available at participating artists studios and participating sponsors' locations throughout West Chelsea.

The High Line Open Studios is organized and presented by West Chelsea artist, Scotto Mycklebus, artist/executive producer and the Public Art Squad Project.
